Oil Tycoon
Holman, 67

NEW YORK, Aug. 13 (AP).

Eugene Holman, 67, retired board chairman and chief executive officer of the Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) died here last night following a brief illness. Mr. Holman, a native of San Angelo, Tex., had headed the world's largest oil company for 16 years.

Before taking Mr. Holman over the post, he held a variety of jobs, including geologist and Army aerial photographer in World War I.

In March 1953 President Eisenhower appointed him a consultant to the National Security Council. In 1956 and 1957 Mr. Holman was chairman of the Business Advisory Council for the Department of Commerce and has continued as a member of the Council. For a time he headed "Crusade for Freedom," fund-raising agency for Radio Free Europe.

Mr. Holman joined Standard Oil as a geologist for a southwestern affiliate, Humble Oil and Refining Co., in the oil boom days of the early 1920's. Before that he had been a geologist for the U. S. Geological Survey.
